Victory highlights growing global presence of HRX following acquisition by Holley Performance Brands and reinforces strength of Safety & Racing portfolio

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 26, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- HRX, the premium racing apparel and safety gear brand built for performance, protection and modern motorsports style, in the Holley Performance Brands (NYSE: HLLY) portfolio, today announced that HRX driver Felix Rosenqvist won the 110th running of the Indianapolis 500 presented by Gainbridge, delivering the closest finish in race history.

Rosenqvist secured victory by .0233 seconds, surpassing the previous record margin set in 1992. The race also established a new Indianapolis 500 record with 70 lead changes.

The win marks a notable milestone for HRX, the Italian motorsports racewear company Holley acquired earlier this year as part of the company's continued expansion of its Safety & Racing portfolio, which includes Simpson, Stilo, HANS and RaceQuip.

"Winning the Indianapolis 500 is a significant achievement for both Felix and the HRX brand," said Del Bohman, Vice President, Safety & Racing Division, Holley Performance Brands. "This result highlights HRX's growing visibility within global motorsports and reinforces the strategic value the brand brings to our Safety & Racing portfolio."

Holley acquired HRX in March 2026 to expand its racewear capabilities and strengthen the company's position across European and international motorsports markets.

"This is an important moment for HRX and the teams and drivers who trust our products at the highest levels of racing," said Ago Alberghino, CEO and Founder of HRX. "For a bespoke Italian racewear brand to be part of such an iconic moment in American motorsports history is incredibly special, and we're proud to celebrate this achievement alongside Holley Performance Brands."
